Positioning

Where our ADHD budgeting app sits in the market, who it is for and why they choose it · AI Development Residency, Fall 2026

POSITIONING STATEMENT

> For adults with ADHD who keep falling off budgets, our app is the budgeting app that shows what is safe to spend in one glance and welcomes you back after any break. Unlike money apps built for steady attention, or ADHD apps with no money tools, we pair real money tools with ADHD-first design, so staying on top of money takes minutes, not willpower.

WHO IT IS FOR

The overwhelmed restarter
Has tried 2 or more budgeting apps and quit each within weeks. Needs near-zero setup and a guilt-free way back after a gap.

The surprise-hit spender
Keeps getting hit by forgotten bills, subscriptions and impulse buys. Needs bills and safe-to-spend always in view.

WHY THEY CHOOSE US

Money at a glance
One safe-to-spend number first on the home screen, never behind taps.

Guilt-free return
A one-tap fresh start after any break; progress saves itself.

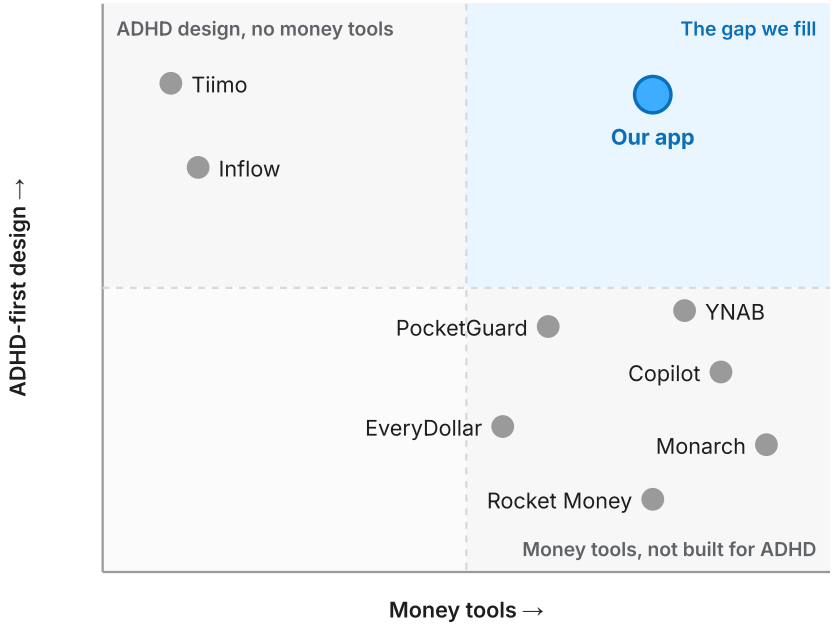

Calm by design
One decision per screen, kind wording, snoozable reminders, no streaks.

HOW WE TALK ABOUT IT

"One number to check, and no shame after a break."

- Calm and kind: "Here's where things landed this week", never "You're over budget".
- Plain words: short sentences, specific buttons, no jargon.
- Respectful: "people with ADHD", never "suffering from ADHD".

POSITIONING MAP

Positions are our judgment from the competitive analysis. YNAB sits closest to the gap because it markets to ADHD users, but it still needs regular upkeep and has no guilt-free reset.

WHAT WE ARE NOT

- Not a dashboard of charts: busy screens overwhelm our audience.
- Not a points-and-streaks game: reward-and-punishment designs backfire.
- Not financial advice: budgeting tools only.

Sources: ADHD Budgeting App PRD (value proposition); Product Release Vision and Scope; Competitive Analysis (company websites, October 2026); Spiel et al., CHI 2022.

Prepared by Robert Wills · © 2026